Working Together

THE OFFICE FOR CATHOLIC
SOCIAL JUSTICE MINISTRY
Of the Archdiocese of Hartford

The Office of Catholic Social Justice Ministry is leading a coalition of grassroots organizations that will be "working together" to address two important efforts.

First, to create a statewide "strategic workforce" with educational and promotional purposes to address how immigrants in the State of Connecticut can effectively access driver's licenses.

Second, work on a three month campaign to advocate with our Federal legislators to make a final push for immigration reform in 2014 that supports a path to citizenship, preserves family unity, and employs safe and humane immigration enforcement practices.

Contact UACT to see how you can help with these efforts.

United Action Connecticut (UACT)

United Action is an interfaith, multi-racial, multi-lingual organization of congregations and community institutions crossing political, economic and urban/suburban boundaries.

UACT's Mission

United Action's mission is the building of powerful, broad-based community organizations rooted in faith and social justice values, working to make concrete improvements in the lives of families and individuals. By identifying and developing leaders and by organizing around well-defined, winnable issues, UACT enables people to understand their own power and to acquire the skills and allies necessary to exercise power collectively and effectively. United Action seeks to strengthen local congregations, and through them to bring regions together and find common ground for the common good.

UACT's Goals

Our goals are strengthening congregations to grow and thrive; developing leaders through intensive training and practical organizing experience that is systematically evaluated and reflected upon; and moving congregations and communities into effective public action for the common good.

Keynote Speaker: John Ryan

John Ryan
Parish Associate
St. Bridget Parish, Manchester, CT

John Ryan was born and spent his youth in Providence, Rhode Island. He attended Catholic schools there. He graduated from St. Michael's College in Vermont with a major in math and spent the next three years with the US Army during the Vietnam War. There were various assignments in the United States and then one year in Korea. Already married with a child, he had a happy reunion with his family at the end of his assignment. After a job search he landed a spot as an actuary at Traveler's Insurance Company in Hartford. For 30 years John worked in pricing homeowner and auto insurance policies. In 2002, John retired and next year became Parish Associate at his parish, St. Bridget Catholic Church in Manchester.

Of his job now he says, "It's fun and frustrating at the same time". Fun because he loves to address social justice issues, often frustrating because results or efforts are not seemingly productive.

His passion is guess what? Social Justice. Even as a child he found himself supporting the "underdog" on the playground. And it continued. At St. Bridget, in the late 1970's he was President of the Parish Council when a couple of parishioners asked the Council to sponsor a Laotian refugee family. That request was unusual, but the Council and the parish warmly welcomed the family. A social justice ministry committee was later suggested and he eventually volunteered to chair it after feeling promptings from the Holy Spirit. With time he became more informed and open to work in the social justice area and worked closely with the Office of Urban Affairs, now the Office of Catholic Social Justice Ministry.

On Saturday, June 14, at the Bishop Rosazza Social Justice Conference, John will receive its first Faith and Justice Award. Surprised and somewhat uncomfortable with the recognition, he feels he is an example of persistence and doesn't give up easily. That is a great example for all committed to making our world a better place. He knows and prays these words of the slain Archbishop Oscar Romero:

*This is what we are about.
We plant seeds that one day will grow.
We water seeds already planted,
knowing that they hold future promise
We lay foundations that will need further development.
We provide yeast that produces far beyond our capabilities.
We cannot do everything, and there is a sense of liberation in realizing that. This enables us to do something, and to do it very well. It may be incomplete,
but it is a beginning, a step along the way,
an opportunity for the Lord's grace to enter and do the rest.
We may never see the end results, but that is the difference between the master builder and the worker.
We are workers, not master builders; ministers, not messiahs.
We are prophets of a future not our own.
Amen.*

HONOREE: Sister Mary Jude Lazarus

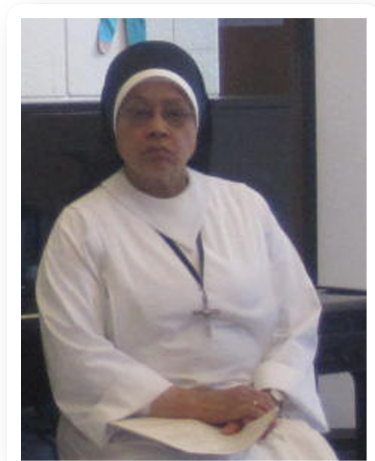

Sister Mary Jude Lazarus was born and spent her childhood years in Jamaica. She came to Baltic, CT to study at the Academy of the Holy Family. During her studies she entered the Catholic Church and sensed a call to religious life, entering the Sisters of Charity, Mother of the Church (S.C.M.C.). Even as a young girl, Sr. Jude had an appreciation for the sound of the Spanish language and wanted to learn it. As a young sister, she earned a Master's in Spanish from Middlebury College and began to teach it at the Academy of the Holy Family. In the mid-80's, she was invited by Bishop Daniel Reilly to work with the Spanish-speaking community in Willimantic. She initially was a Pastoral Associate when the community was part of St. Joseph Parish in Willimantic, and she helped guide the community as they formed their own parish, building Sagrado Corazón Church in Windham. She has a special place in the hearts of several generations of young people who have grown up in Sagrado Corazón! In 1997 Sr. Jude was appointed by Bishop Daniel Hart as Director of Hispanic Ministry for the Diocese of Norwich. Although she continued her active involvement with Sagrado Corazón Parish, she also began working with the Hispanic communities in New London and Middletown, and she helped establish the Catholic Hispanic communities in Norwich and Clinton. In the midst of all this, she found the time to continue her education, earning advanced degrees in both counseling and theology. Sister is well known by many for her dedication to the social teaching of the Catholic Church, especially as it relates to immigration issues in this country. She has helped clergy, religious and laypeople to educate themselves on issues of social justice. She has led many trips to both Hartford and Washington, D.C. She has been a strong supporter of United Action for many years.

Tribute to Sister Mary Jude:

By Father Bob Washabugh

Sister Mary Jude Lazarus was born not so long ago in Jamaica. Sometimes, I'm sure, she felt like a motherless child, but she did have parents who cared for her deeply. They simply didn't have the resources in an impoverished country to care for her and her sister. When she was very young, she was placed in a home run by a very generous, but very unbending lady with strict Baptist leanings. This lady eventually adopted our young waif and later sent her off to a boarding school in Connecticut, run by very generous, but unbending nuns of strict Roman Catholic leanings: Holy Family Academy in Baltic. The hope was to give her discipline, life skills and a sense of direction. It worked well beyond our Baptist lady's expectations. The bright and attractive student with the charming Jamaican accent did well in school, converted to Catholic faith, pursued higher education in New York City, but to her own surprise, was strongly attracted to religious life. She became a Sister of Charity of Our Lady Mother of the Church. In little time, she was sent to Middlebury College in Vermont to study Spanish so that she might teach in the same academy where she had been a student. She taught, managed sports teams, directed musical productions, and served as the all-around go-to person for an awfully lot of young girls in the school.

The summer of 1985 was a big turning point. The Spanish-speaking community at St. Joseph Church (almost entirely Puerto Rican) was also feeling a bit orphaned. A Cuban priest, Father Gonzalo Regalado, had built up the community, but when he took another assignment, the Church was hard-pressed to find a replacement priest. The permanent deacon, Felipe Silva, kept the community alive for several years until I, who knew absolutely nothing, was assigned to the post. The wise planners of the diocese thought that Sister Jude who knew a little more than I, next to nothing except Spanish grammar, would be a good collaborator. We proved to be an affable team with good chemistry, a bit like Stiller and Meara, Nichols and May, Crosby and Hope, or Bob and Ray. We had complementary skills. I would think of things to do and then Sister Jude would do them. Sometimes, she would think of things to do, convince me that I had thought of them first, and then she would do them. My biggest complaint in those years was that it was hard to work with a person who never got tired. We had complementary personalities. She was concrete-sequential. She would say, "Let's get it done (like this afternoon)." I tended to take the long view. I would say, "Let's think about that for a while (like for a few months)."

To say that Sister Jude could be fierce sometimes is an understatement. If a kid was in trouble, or if a kid had potential to become something, but was blocked by lack of tuition, lack of a strong mentor, or increasingly as time went on, immigration roadblocks, you would see in Sister Jude something like Gen. George Patton's resolve during the Battle of the Bulge and the final push towards Berlin. She wouldn't give up or give in. She wouldn't let that kid give up either. A thing of beauty!

During the 80's and 90's, the Mexican presence became pronounced in Willimantic. At the same time, the Spanish-speaking community took on new maturity and new stability. They themselves (well, encouraged more than a little by Sister Jude) built their own place of worship and became an independent parish with equal status to St. Joseph's and St. Mary's parishes. I suppose the average person in Church ministry might say, "Hmmm, 12 years in the same place. That's about right. Time for a break." Sister Jude is going on 30 years of ministry with the Hispanic Community in Willimantic and in Eastern Connecticut. Not 30 years of coasting. 30 years of pushing hard and caring deeply. Now that the Spanish-speaking community has become predominantly an immigrant community and now that so much of that community is blocked from normalizing its immigration status by an unjust system, Sister Jude cannot rest or take a break. She doesn't want to. We are so fortunate to have her.

Message From United Action President: Steve Volpini

So much has happened with UACT in the last year. A year ago, we were working with several other immigrant rights groups to pass the CT. driver's license bill for non-citizens. Well, that did pass and now we are working with other groups to help the many thousands who will apply. On this front, we are whole-heartedly joining the efforts of the Office of Catholic Social Justice Ministry.

UACT will also continue the fight for state scholarships for our immigrant college students—helping them to complete their degrees and follow their dreams.

Naturally, we are still pressuring CT members of Congress to press for comprehensive immigration reform that will lead to a pathway for citizenship for all 11 million non-documented folks who wish to live, work and raise their families in the United States—and to become U.S. citizens.

Part of our activity has been to call attention to the dragnet used by the U.S. immigration office to detain and deport two million immigrants—often on questionable grounds. United Action helped organize dozens of placard-carrying immigrants in a statewide anti-deportation caravan on April 5. We also joined scores of anti-deportation protesters when President Obama visited Central CT State University in March. Later in March, we brought a speaker from the National Day Laborers Organizing Network to the same university as part of a conference entitled “One Nation, Under Surveillance.”

We also supported a push by the Brazilian Immigration Center for a Domestic Workers Bill of Rights in CT—which was successful in getting the legislature to establish a committee to study the issue, and we continue to support the effort to win higher wages for tipped workers, many of whom are immigrants.

As UACT has joined hands with dozens of other organizations in these causes, we have also continued to support, advise and publicize the efforts of El Ministerio de Hermandad in Meriden and Los Manos Unidas in New Britain. These groups, and Alcanzando el Mismo Sueno in Willimantic have linked themselves in training, organizing and at rallies and protests for the past three years.

These groups have organized internally and made themselves known in the community, conducting computer training workshops, bringing in the local mayor and members of the city council, helping with voter registration, among other activities. As immigrant groups have done for centuries in America, they are making themselves into integral parts of the community.

United Action has been enriched in the past year by the active membership of St. Bridget's Church in Manchester. Diane DeJoannis and Amparo Cabezas have joined our board from that church, which has a very active social action arm.

We have also formed an Immigration Task Force, which is focusing right now on our very successful Immigration Forums. At the 18 conferences held so far at faith communities and colleges, we have united interested citizens with immigrant families, sharing a meal and talking about the immigrant experience.

Besides immigration issues, UACT has been active for many years in the expansion of health care access in CT. For years, we have held forums, besieged the legislature and helped push for universal health care coverage in this state.

This year, we begin to expand the effort in health care reform. With co-chairs Johanna Schaefer of Temple Beth Shalom in Chester and Bob Pearston from the Unitarian Universalist Church in Meriden, UACT joined the annual NAMI walk on May 17th in Bushnell Park.

NAMI, the National Association for Mental Illness, is the premier advocacy group for those who suffer from mental illness. United Action is joining their cause, seeking to end the stigma of mental illness and to increase treatment and recovery for those who suffer from it.

United Action is about unity—seeing how social justice causes can bring us together. And we are about action—linking people of faith to strengthen our voice and our effectiveness.

Thank you to all who have made our efforts possible.

MENTAL HEALTH

The organization UACT has selected to assist with efforts and change in mental health issues is the National Alliance on Mental Illness (NAMI) and Keep the Promise (KTP).

NAMI's mission is to improve the quality of life for all those impacted by mental illness, by providing support, education and advocacy as part of the KTP Coalition, a statewide mental health advocacy network. NAMI and KTP produce yearly legislative priorities, attend statewide and community meetings on adult and children's mental health issues and participate in legislative work through meetings with legislators, advocacy trainings and public education and engagement.

2013 successes included expansions of supportive housing through a Rental Assistance Program and a new Department of Housing to centralize coordination and leadership of state programs, funding for the creation of new Assertive Community Treatment (ACT) teams, which use a person-centered, recovery-based approach to provide not only mental health services but vocational, education and wellness training and peer support services. NAMI also secured the creation of a regional behavioral health consultation system for pediatricians and mental health training for teachers, and requirements that insurance plans provide better services for mental health issues.

NAMI is now focused on 2014, not only to protect these improvements as the Sandy Hook tragedy becomes more distant but to overcome some of the problems created by post-Sandy Hook legislation, including reporting responsibilities which might cause families to avoid getting help for their kids in need. NAMI and the KTP Coalition are looking to expand further supportive initiatives in housing (as an alternative to institutionalization), to ensure enhanced services by the Department of Children and Families and the Department of Mental Health and Addiction Services, strengthen school-based mental health services, and to promote wellness and self-sufficiency by safeguarding civil rights.

Almost all of us are affected by mental illness. Let's help NAMI help us all.

UACT joined Congregation Beth Shalom Rodfe Zedek to form a team for the annual NAMI Walk on May 17, 2014. Not only did this team raise $1,806.00 but helped raise awareness for NAMI in the respective organizations.

IMMIGRATION REFORM

Immigration reform has been talked about for many years. But to get meaningful immigration reform or some type of relief for the millions of undocumented immigrants living in the United States, just talking about reform or what could happen is not enough. The community needs to get together and fight for it.

Two years ago President Obama introduced DACA (Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals). As a result of this bold, administrative action many DREAMers saw their lives change dramatically. With their work permit and Social Security Number in hand they were able to find jobs, get their driver's license and not live in fear of being deported. But for most undocumented immigrants the fight continued as concerns increased due to the growing number of families being separated by deportation. In order to put pressure on the authorities over the deportations, activists began engaging in civil disobedience, not just once but several times. For the first time, undocumented immigrants and their activist allies were willing to risk arrest, and because of these actions the U.S. Senate passed a Bill that would legalize millions of undocumented Americans.

It has been nearly a year since the Senate passed that Bill and yet the House of Representatives has not acted. Regardless of how much they are being pressured, they stand as they have before, unwilling to pass some type of reform. However, President Obama also seems unwilling to take action by either offering administrative relief for all undocumented immigrants, similar to DACA, or at least by halting the ever rising tide of deportations.

Deportations continue and, as a result, families keep being separated. Regardless of what some people may say, we must continue to fight for immigration reform, look for administrative relief, and push to end the alarming number of deportations. While these are national issues there is much that can also be done here in Connecticut.

The law passed in 2013, which allows undocumented immigrants in Connecticut to obtain a driver's license, will take effect in January Of 2015. However, many in the community do not know the requirements or understand the process. In states that have similar laws it is a fact that there is a 90% failure rate when people attempt to obtain their license. That is why UACT and other grassroots organizations have formed a coalition to provide informational sessions that will make sure people who are eligible will know the procedure and documentation needed to successfully get their license.

Another major issue in Connecticut is the fight to get institutional aid for undocumented students. This action would give these students an opportunity to afford college, or at least make it less expensive than what it is now.

Connecticut Students 4 a Dream (C4D) has taken the initiative to start the campaign while UACT and other organizations support the effort.

Furthermore, DREAMers with DACA will need to start renewing their documents. It is important that they do it right or they will run the risk of losing their DACA rights. U.S. Customs recently released the new forms so it is imperative that pro-immigrants rights organizations develop new DACA clinics in cities around Connecticut to ensure proper compliance.

Nevertheless, the most important thing that should be learned is that nothing could've been achieved if the undocumented community remained in the shadows and not stepped forward to demand change. None of the victories, DACA, the Senate Bill, the driver's license bill, would have occurred if the undocumented community decided to stay quiet and lay low. Nothing would have happened if allies did not join the movement and fight side by side with those who need them the most, undocumented Americans. We all need to keep our hopes high and keep fighting for change, because united, we will win.

Executive Director's Message on Immigration Reform

To say that immigration reform has been at the center of United Action's social justice efforts for the past several years would be an understatement.

UACT and numerous other organizations have poured their body and soul into reform efforts for many months with the hope that Congress or the President would take some type of action to relieve the situation. Unfortunately arrests and deportations of undocumented people have reached record levels, the House of Representatives continues to drag its feet on reform and the immigrant community suffers both economically and emotionally at the hands of unscrupulous employers and shadowy service agencies. In addition, despite a national call to end the Secure Communities program, racial profiling and police abuse in many parts of the country has increased, violating fundamental constitutional rights.

In spite of these relentless setbacks, however, there are suddenly some glimmers of hope. Here in Connecticut the culture of fear, mistrust and isolation that was so prevalent two years ago has diminished with the passage of the Trust Act and the Driver's License Bill for undocumented residents in 2013. Connecticut's legislative delegation is firmly behind national reform and remarkably there are hints that some type of immigration reform could happen before Congress' August recess. Social justice is never achieved easily. One must continue to fight and stand up for their right's, regardless of the odds and a seemingly hopeless situation. Immigration reforms will one day happen, but only if we refuse to let the reform movement die. As justice advocates we need to keep reform efforts in the public's conscience.

UACT is proud to be a part of the Working Together coalition that is dedicated to pushing that effort along. By insisting on national reform that supports a path to citizenship, preserves family unity and employs safe and humane immigration enforcement practices, this coalition intends to persuade Connecticut's legislative delegation to lead the way in this national effort. For the remainder of 2014 UACT plans to broaden its organizing reach by expanding into new communities. More "Coming to America" forums are scheduled, and other initiatives are being explored, such as citizenship workshops, legal aid clinics and mobile health clinics. Until national reform, that includes a path to citizenship, becomes a reality UACT will continue to find ways to bring relief to the immigrant community.

CHANGE IS HERE

Quality health care coverage is within reach.

For individuals and families, the open enrollment period for 2015 is scheduled to begin November 15, 2014. You may be able to enroll in coverage sooner if you qualify for Medicaid or have a major life change.

Enrollment in Medicaid (HUSKY) and the Children's Health Insurance Plan (CHIP) is open year round for eligible persons and families. You may also still be eligible to enroll in coverage throughout the year if you or a member of your household has experienced a Special Enrollment Qualifying Life Event in the past 60 days or you will in the next 60 days. Qualifying Life Events may include: child birth, adoption, the death of a member of the household, marriage, loss of current health care coverage, loss or reduction in employer insurance contributions, new legal CT or U.S. residency, or U.S. lawful presence. Please call our contact center at 855-805-4325 to see if you may qualify.
